Obscure glass, Georgian,
openers or vents?

How?

Astragal bars

Astragal bars are fitted externally on both sides on the glass surface and inside to give the complete appearance of separate sections. Whereas Georgian bars are fitted only internally between the glass panes. Astragals imitate wooden traditional glazing bars of old that used to separate windows into smaller sections for an authentic period window look.

Astragal and Georgian bars do not compromise the insulating abilities of the glazing unit as in both cases it remains 1 glazing unit. Our Astragal bars are 20mm thick, and are colour matched to your window colours to ensure the right look.
