Sirs

This seems to be the point from which the proposal to extend the 'Garlands Lane Site' should be stopped. It would cause further trouble on an already dangerous corner, which already has a flooding problem and once again will intrude into the 'NATIONAL FOREST' area, and arable land. this further spread of travelers, now operating out of '6 Sites' will result in a traveler ratio of 1 in 7. It is quite often to have horses tethered on the piece of land which has a ditch running through it, surely this is in conflict with current countryside policies.
