

All Cars Repaired Queens Road Hinckley

Planning Application 26/00031/FUL

1 Response to LCC Archaeology and Conservation Officer comments

Historic Building Assessment

Please see attached a photographic record of

- (i) historic photographs of the building as originally developed as a hosiery factory.
- (ii) recent photographs of the building externally and internally showing that most of the original building was demolished many years ago and replaced with the current more modern building with only a small element of the original building retained
- (iii) as can be seen from the recent photographs much of the internal structure of the original building has been removed and altered to accommodate the current use as a car repair garage including the removal of internal walls and any historic staircases that linked the ground floor to the upper floor.
- (iv) Although a staircase allows access to the upper floor of the remaining original building that is left this is a modern timber staircase and merely gives access to what is now a storage area for car parts.

The original building is on the extreme left of this photograph

The frontage of the original building which was demolished and replaced with the current building many years ago

Two photographs of Queens Riad from the junction of Thorneycroft Road with the original building on the left

All Cars Queens Road, Hinckley

Historic Building Assessment

External Elevations

Internal Ground Floor adapted for garage use with modern steel support beams

Internal staircase to first floor

First floor storeroom use

Internal View of roof structure with modern electrical fittings

