I can see that there is justification here to prune the lateral crown spread away from the property, the respective limbs do appear to be overextended.

Mechanical failures are not presently foreseeable.

Comments: These works would leave an atypical crown form and as such there is a case for a reduction of the entire crown. If this is something that would be of interest to the agent/customer I believe a crown reduction of 2.5-3m would be suitable, using arborists discretion on most suitable pruning points.

I would also encourage that the Ivy is severed at ground level and removed up to crown break to enable unobstructed inspection of the main stem in the future.

Kind regards
